Yes, when a virus made a bunch of computer monitors spit sparks, I rolled my eyes. It didn't become my new favorite movie 'til after that bit.

[locked] Dream Journal

All right, unconscious mind. We're coming to an accommodation. If the dreams are you cleaning

Elvis doesn't live here anymore.

Hey there. Sorry about the drama. It was... it was an emotional decision, and I didn't Poppets. Puppets. Poppet puppets. Scary.

Er, not really the same genre, I think, but have you seen Chungking Express? While we're talking favorite movies.

Also, did the computer spitting sparks add or detract to the movie? Ridiculous inaccuracies can be jarring (as in Hackers) or an integral part of the charm (as in A Knight's Tale), or at least, that's my not-terribly-humble opinion.

Would this have anything to do with the cast?

Grog am shallow.

I mean, John Woo cop/criminal buddy pic? Only with girls? Who walk on the ceiling and shoot people and beat up five guys in an elevator in the space of two floors?

Guh.

(Oh, forgot to say: Not actually John Woo. Or the script would have been, you know, scriptier.)

I remember this one. I should rewatch it.

So what made it your new favorite movie?

(I don't remember much of it. Watched it when it was first released to cinemas.)

They do everything Chow Yun Fat does. Backwards, and in high heels.

I'm not kidding about the high heels, either.

Does anyone else rate movies by how many beers it takes to enjoy them? Or by how old you need to be to enjoy the film the first time you see it?(Most successive viewings are grandfathered in, but you need to keep yourself innoculated)

Strange Brew- 2 beers. Or college. (like there's a difference?)

Young Einstein- 1-3 beers, or a 103* fever.

Buckaroo Banzai- College.
